Special Sale Spring Frocks To-Day

Rather early for a special sale of Spring Dresses, isn't it? True-ordinarily you would have had to wait until June for such an opportunity. But here is the explanation:

One of the foremost manufacturers of New York found that because of the lateness of the season the time in which to sell his exquisite line of Spring Dresses would be much too short, so he shipped us eighty-five of the prettiest of them much below

As is usual, we are giving to our patrons the benefit of any bargain we run across. These dresses are all in the season's favored materials, and as we looked at their flawless workmanship, rich colorings and style, we thought that they were really the prettiest we have ever offered.

SPRING DRESSES, in crepe de chine, Canton crepe, charmeuse, taffeta and flowered crepes. Suitable for street, afternoon and evening wear. These are the newest models, with flaring ripple tunic, ruffles and the chic pannier and bustle styles. Would be considered as moderately priced at from $35.00 to $40.00. $25.00

LOVELY FROCKS in Crepe de Chine. This Dansant Frock has a bodice of silk shadow lace. The skirt has a flaring tunic and the latest ruffle effects. Easily worth $20.00

FEAR FRUIT CROP

Growers in Valley Apprehensive Over Frosts, Which Generally Come in April.

Winchester, Va., March 29 .- The reurn of warm weather last week was iot welcomed by fruit growers, many of whom declare it means that much of the early fruit will be ruined by the freezing frosts which will come in April, unless all precedents are broken. The weather had been most favorable for fruit growers until the middle of last week. There was one continued spell of cold weather in the Virginia Valley from January, and this had the effect of preventing trees from budding, and thus enabling them to withstand the late frosts, but many of the orchard men now appear gloomy over the situation in regard to peaches, pears, cherries, plums and other early fruits. Hundreds of trees are now budding rapidly and should the present warm weather continue a few days longer the buds will probably open. This section of the country is always visited by freezing weather some time during the month of April, and orchard men are apprehensive. The apple trees, however, continue backward, and it is not thought the April frosts will have any material effect upon that variety of fruit. The fruit industry now lends all others in the Winchester section, and the success or failure of theso crops means much to every one.

Residents of Winchester who own dogs have been warned to keep them properly muzzled or penned up on accoun of several rabid dogs being found running at large at April, unless all precedents are broken
